SUNHILLO TECHNICAL SERVICES AWARDED NAS LAB SUPPORT SERVICES CONTRACT AS A PART OF THE WINNING ADDX TEAM

West Berlin, New Jersey, March 18, 2015. Sunhillo Technical Services, as part of the winning Addx Corporation team, was awarded the National Airspace System (NAS) Lab Support Services contract from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

The primary scope of the program is to support the Laboratory Operations and Scheduling Branch at the FAA William J. Hughes Technical Center (WJHTC) in Atlantic City, NJ. Sunhillo Technical Services (STS) will provide support across all service areas within the WJHTC and provide immediate support positions for Information Technology (Analyst) and Technical Support.

“This is an exceptional opportunity for us,” said John Berthold, Vice President of Sunhillo Technical Services, “as we continue to support the FAA and grow our on-site support capabilities at the WJHTC.” STS has technical staff working on multiple contracts within the WJHTC including, the Aeronautical Information Management Modernization (AIMM) program, Service Operations Support (SOS) contract, and the Data Communications Integrated Services (DCIS) program. “We are in it for the long run”, John continued, “committed to delivering only highly qualified, competent, and customer focused talent that meets or exceeds FAA expectations”. As proof of our commitments, our STS DCIS team was recently awarded the 2014 Partner Excellence Award and Supplier of the Year Award from the Harris Corporation, prime contractor for DCIS, for their exceptional service support at the WJHTC.

Sunhillo Technical Services, a subsidiary to Sunhillo Corporation with headquarters located in close proximity to the WJHTC, provides engineering, test and evaluation services to the FAA, partners and customers worldwide.
